GREEKS DID NOT CELEBRATE HERE

Local Colony is Satisfied With American Christmas in Preference to Their Own.

THEY HAVE NO GIFT GIVING

Big Day Comes Saturday, When New Years is Recognized—May be Remembered Here.

Local Greeks did not celebrate their Christmas day on last Saturday as Greeks all over the United States did. In practically all of the Indiana cities where Greek colonies are to be found the day of all days was remembered by them. The celebration is conducted in the home and is decidedly different from the American celebration of Christ's birthday. Pete Adams, who manages the Greek candy kitchen, said that the local colony did not recognize their national holiday. He said that they were satisfied with the American holiday and celebrated it with them.

The observance of the day is strikingly oriental. No presents are exchanged at this time, for the Greeks do not give or receive presents until New Year's day, when the elders give but nothing is ever received from the young. Although the Greeks, many of whom have been here for some time and the customs observed in their native land are not so vivid in their minds now as formerly, they still celebrate according to their religion and faith.

It is very probable that the local Greeks will celebrate their New Year's day which comes one week after their Christmas or next Saturday. Last year several of the Greeks here went to Indianapolis and took part in the celebration there. So far they have made no plans this year.

The Greek New Years is celebrated on a larger scale than is Christmas. The evening before New Years all members of the family participate in a card game in which small sums of money are staked, thus trying their luck on the coming day. Exactly at midnight a large cake is cut, which contains a straw, representing a piece of money. The person who receives the straw is considered lucky.

FOR MEDICAL EXAMINATION

The teachers of five townships met Saturday in joint session in the court house. One of the questions discussed and generally favored was the proposed medical examination of school children. The teachers also went on record as opposed to the effort being made to repeal the uniform system of text books law.

SPELL IT JUST PLAIN KELLY

Chief Doorkeeper Doesn't Agree With Stella Mayhew When She Sings.

K-e-l-l-e-y-g-h.

OFFICE "SOOK" HIM, IT SEEMS

In giving a brief review of the appointees of the legislature the Indianapolis Sun says:

Spell it plain K-e-l-l-e-y, please, when you write to the chief doorkeeper of the senate. He doesn't agree with Stella Mayhew when she sings K-e-l-l-e-y-g-h. John Kelley is unvarnished John Kelley, and that's good enough for anybody who watches the present administration or others, for that matter.

Kelley was elected street commissioner of Rushville in 1909. He was in the engrossing room during the session two years ago. He worked as the proprietor of a commission business in Rushville up until January 3, and his heels have not worn one a single tile in the Dension lobby. As a friend put it: "Kelley did not seek the office, but the office 'sook' him."

PREACHING ALL WEEK.

There will be preaching services at the United Presbyterian church this evening and every evening this week at 7:30, except Saturday. Communion services next Sabbath morning. Friends invited and a cordial welcome.

AVERS HOLD-UP WAS ATTEMPTED

Lifford Brown Says Robber Jumped to His Horse's Head in South Bridge Saturday Night.

THAT WAS NO PLACE FOR HIM

Ran to Jersey City For Aid and When he Returned Outfit Was Gone.

The lights were not burning in the south bridge Saturday night and thereby hangs a tale. That's the very reason why Lifford Brown, living on the Stevens farm south of the city, says that he was held up in the bridge Saturday night and that's the reason why there's no one to deny his story. Anyway Brown was driving home late Saturday night, when some man jumped to his horse's head just as he was driving into the bridge, so he declares. Brown did not wait to see whether or not his purpose was to hold him up. Who knows, he may have wanted a ride home? But Brown did not hesitate long in that community. He decided that he could trust his heels better than his horse and buggy, so he deserted the horse, leaving it to be captured by the enemy.

Brown will never believe that he was not held up. He leaped from the buggy, according to his version, and ran as fast as his legs would carry him on over to Jersey City. He never turned to see if the alleged hold-up man was in pursuit or if he took his buggy. He rushed up to the nearest house, which happened to be inhabited by Stillwell Wilkinson and family and aroused everyone. Mr. Wilkinson telephoned the police here and came back to the bridge with Brown.

All their efforts were useless for no hold-up man could they find. They searched all over the bridge but no signs of a robber. They also found that the horse and buggy were gone. Brown naturally inferred that the would-be robber had taken his outfit and he gave it up for lost. He told Mr. Wilkinson that he was just driving into the bridge when his horse suddenly reared and jumped to one side. That was the sign for Brown to start on his sprint and he left.

Brown set out for a very pleasant walk home Saturday night, after he could find no trace of the robber. While on his weary journey he met two men in a buggy, who told him they had met a horse, drawing an empty buggy. When Brown arrived home he found his faithful animal, standing in front of the gate ready to go in home.

RUSH DONATES SCHOOL MONEY

This County Pays Into State $16,581.72 and Receives $8,719.62 in Apportionment.

HELPS SUPPORT SHORT ONES

Fayette and Union Are Smallest in District and Therefore Get Least Money.

The total school enumeration for the State of Indiana is 754,972 and the total apportionment of school funds for the State is $1,374,049.04, according to the announcement of Charles A. Greathouse, State superintendent of public instruction. This vast amount of money will be expended by the various counties of the State for educational purposes exclusively.

Marion county, in which Indianapolis is located, naturally draws the largest apportionment — $107,611.14. In that county there the 59,127 school going children and the apportionment was made on a basis of $1.82 for each school going child.

The number of children and the draws of the counties of the Sixth congressional district are as follows:

Children Apportionment
Wayne	10,023	$18,241.86
Shelby	7,191	13,087.62
Henry	6,863	12,490.66
Decatur	5,308	9,660.56
Hancock	5,092	9,267.44
Rush	4,791	8,719.62
Franklin	4,345	7,907.90
Fayette	3,676	6,690.32
Union	1,470	2,675.40

Totals 48,756 $88,662.38

As will be seen by the foregoing Fayette county is threatened with race suicide. Of course it is a small county, but is wealthy and quite long on "pink teas" and the like, but shy on valuation. The school enumeration and the apportionment for Henry county is practically one-third greater than that of Fayette. Wayne leads the list of the district, Shelby is second and Henry county is third, while Fayette and Union bring up the rear.

The valuation of the taxable property also cuts a figure in the apportionment. Some of the counties are not even self-supporting. In the case of Rush county, $16,581.72 school tax was collected, but this county draws only $8,719.62. The balance goes to some other county, according to the apportionment, which had not sufficient taxables. Who knows, perhaps Rush county is helping to educate children in Scott county, which is short about $1,000.

CONDUCTOR GETS BLAME

Rush County Man Angered When Car Runs Past Station.

The much blamed conductor had another tussle Saturday. This particular conductor had charge of the 12:20 p. m. west-bound car, says the Lewisville Traveler. John Widau of near Mays, Rush county, stood at the station here waiting to greet Mrs. John Widau, due to arrive here on the car in question. The conductor allowed the motorman to slip by the station and Mrs. Widau was compelled to leave the car a square or two west of where she had intended to disembark. John told the conductor a thing or two which will doubtless help him to remember that there is passenger traffic here once in a while.

ESCAPE INJURY WHEN AUTO SKIDS

Miss Pearl Marlatt and Paul Peter Willis, Well Known Here, in Harrowing Accident.

CAR TURNS COMPLETELY OVER

While enroute in a fast Overland automobile from Alexandria to Indianapolis yesterday, Miss Pearl Marlatt, a Connersville girl and sister of Mrs. J. H. Scholl of North Jackson street and Miss Anna O. Marlatt, teacher in the local high school, and Paul Peter Willis, press agent for the Overland company of Indianapolis, had a narrow escape from serious injury or possible death near Noblesville. When within a mile of that city their car skidded and turned turtle. Both occupants were thrown some distance and fortunately were not badly injured as they would have been had they been caught under the car. The machine was taken to Noblesville for repairs and the two young people returned home on an interurban car. Mr. Willis is a Connersville boy and is well known here as is Miss Marlatt.

WELL KNOWN AGED WOMAN SUCCUMBS

Mrs. Martha A. Shaw, 82 Years Old, Widow of the Rev. Knowles Shaw, Expired Sunday.

PARALYSIS CAUSE OF DEATH

Mrs. Martha A. Shaw, 82 years old, widow of the late Rev. Knowles Shaw died early yesterday morning at her home in Arlington. Mrs. Shaw was stricken with paralysis last Tuesday and this eventually caused her death.

The Rev. Knowles Shaw was killed in a railroad wreck in Texas June 7, 1878, while traveling as an evangelist. He was a composer of many beautiful sacred songs, some of which will be sung at the funeral of Mrs. Shaw. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Gabriel Beckner of Arlington. The funeral services will be held Tuesday morning at ten o'clock at the Arlington Christian church, conducted by the Rev. W. S. Smith, assisted by the Rev. A. L. Arcutt. Burial will take place at the Rushville East Hill cemetery.

MARION JAIL NOW HARBORS NOBLE

Sheriff Clata Bebout Rushes Alleged Murderer Off to Indianapolis For Safe Keeping.

IMAGINARY MOBS ARE FEARED

Said That Noble is Despondent and Feared That he May Take His Life.

Even before the Saturday evening's edition of the Daily Republican had been delivered which told of Ben Noble, the alleged murderer of Albert Sprague of Decatur county being sheltered in the Rush county jail, because the case had been sent here from the Decatur circuit court on a change of venue, Sheriff Clata Bebout had slipped off to Indianapolis with his prisoner and had lodged him in the Marion county jail for safe keeping away from the imaginary mobs of Decatur county. Ever since the crime was committed the feeling in Decatur county has been very strong against Noble and it was feared that during the excitement incident to the murder, a mob of infuriated citizens might take Noble from the jail and do him harm. With that idea in mind, the Decatur county sheriff rushed Noble off to Marion county soon after the crime was generally known.

Since that time Noble has been harbored in the Marion county jail with the exceptions of the two times that he has been brought before the court in Decatur county. The first time he pleaded guilty to the murder, but the jury failed to agree on a sentence and was dismissed. Now he has entered a plea of not guilty and will fight for his life. The trial will probably attract interest all over the State since it was one of the most atrocious murders ever recorder in this section of Indiana.

The story comes from Greensburg that it has been feared Noble would commit suicide. It is said that the Marion county sheriff has said that if Noble should take his own life, it would not be a surprise to him. It is said that he has been suffering with a melancholia for the past few weeks and is in a very despondent frame of mind.

Since the suicide of a fellow prisoner in the Indianapolis jail a few weeks ago, which came about when the wretched man leaped to his death from a second story window, Noble seems, for the first time, to realize his present position and it is worrying him. On two occasions since being in the Marion county jail he has been found to have powdered glass in his possession and on one occasion a pocket knife was found in his clothes. What he intended to do, however, is mere conjecture, yet the Marion county sheriff told the Decatur county sheriff that he believed Noble would be self-slain if he got opportunity.

INSTALLATION TONIGHT.

The Knights of Pythias will install officers tonight, to which all members, their families and friends are invited. Will M. Sparks will deliver the address and the Thomas sisters of Arlington will furnish music. J. Q. Thomas and Harvey Cowing will be the installing officers.

MOSCOW WINS.

The St. Paul high school basket ball team Friday night defeated the Fairland high school team on the St. Paul floor by a score of 21 to 20. The second team was defeated by the Moscow team by a score of 17 to 12.

DID MUCH FOR MAN IN HIS LIFE

Charles Goodyear, Discoverer of Process For Vulcanizing Rubber, War Born 110 Years Ago.

HE DIED HEAVILY IN DEBT

No More Pathetic or Stirring Figure in Entire Gallery of American Inventors.

Charles Goodyear, discoverer of the process for vulcanizing rubber, which has done more than any other agency in the history of the world to safeguard human life from the inclemencies of the weather and promote the physical comfort of mankind, was born at New Haven, Conn., 110 years ago (Dec. 29th.)

In the entire gallery of American inventors who have enriched the world with their discoveries within the last century and a half, there is no more pathetic or striking than that of Goodyear. In his refusal to recognize defeat and his determination to overcome every obstacle that barred his path to the goal he was seeking, no American more interestingly typified the restless spirit of the Yankee, with his inordinate ambition, indomitable enterprise and unquenchable enthusiasm when life seemed darkest and the fates most unfriendly. With his brilliant contemporaries, Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph and Elias Howe, inventor of the sewing machine, like himself both natives of New England, Goodyear withstood the ridicule and harsh treatment of his fellow men with a stoical indifference that was as impervious to outward impression as the rubber he evolved by his process. Thrust into jail time and again for debt, often with nothing to eat, his sickly wife and five little children threatened with eviction, a dead child on his hand and no money to pay for its burial, and with every human face averted from him, his steadfast devotion to the problem he had set out to solve, presents a picture without a parallel in the life story of those who have helped to give world wide preeminence to American inventive genius.

Until Goodyear pointed the way for vulcanizing the latex of the tropical tree, which Herrea, who accompanied Columbus on his second voyage to America, found in wide use among the Indians in the form of shoes, bouncing-balls and bottles, it had no practical commercial value except as an eraser for pencil-marks. As late as 1770 it is difficult to realize there was but one shop in all England where it could be found and there a single ounce of it sold for 75c. Recalling this it is significant of the tremendous growth of the industry that for the current year the United States alone has imported rubber for manufacturing purposes valued at $110,000,000 this being more than half of the world's total output approximately $200,000,000. It is to the share of humanity that Goodyear although he saved millions of lives by his discovery and laid the foundation for one of the greatest and most profitable of the world's industries derived no financial benefit from it and died heavily in debt. Thirty thousand out of the 60,000 inhabitants of Akron, Ohio, and 10,000 out of the 14,000 inhabitants of Naugatuck, Conn., are supported directly or indirectly today by the industry into which Goodyear breathed vitality and impetus. In various parts of the world—Brazil, British Guiana, Mexico, the Malay States and wherever else the climate and soil favor its cultivation—a million men and hundreds of millions of dollars are employed in providing the steadily increasing demand for the now indispensable staple which his discovery introduced to commercial use.

In this contemplation of this enormous development it is hard to reconcile it with the plight of Goodyear in those gloomy days when carrying on his experiments he was forced to sell his children's school books for five dollars; deposit his umbrella with Commodore Vanderbilt as security for a ticket on the latter's ferry across New York Bay and pawn all his household belongings to secure funds with which to continue his investigations. It is a story that will live as long as American history endures and give inspiration and hope to thousands yet unborn.

DOES NOT HAVE TO GIVE A LIST

Railroad's Employees' Roll Is Its Own Affair.

RESISTED THE COMMISSION

When Indiana Railway Commission Ordered the Big Four to Turn Over the Roll of Its Telegraph Operators Together With Details of Their Service, the Road Went to Court and Won Victory.

Indianapolis, Jan. 9.—The Big Four railway won a victory over the railroad commission of Indiana in the Marion circuit court when Judge Charles Remster decided that he had no authority to order H. G. Houghton, general superintendent of the Big Four, to give the commission the names, ages, addresses, length of service and records of all telegraph operators employed by the road in Indiana. The court did not hold that the commission could not obtain the information it sought, but ruled that it had followed the wrong procedure in the case before the court. The ruling was given on a motion to discharge Houghton, as representative of the road, from a rule that he must show cause why he should not produce the information sought by the commission.

The suit was filed by the commission against Mr. Houghton after an investigation of a wreck in Brightwood, in which several were killed. At the time an operator's word stood against that of a conductor of a freight crew. The members of the commission asked Mr. Houghton to obtain for them the information giving the ages and experience of all telegraph operators the road employed. He refused to supply the information, on advice of counsel.

POISON IN HIS FOOD

Elevator Man Dying at Pittsburg, Police Hold Wife.

Pittsburg, Jan. 9.—G. M. Strobaker, superintendent of the Morton Grain and Hay company, is lying in the South Side hospital dying from strychnine poisoning. Mrs. Mary Strobaker, his wife, was locked up by the police. That enough strychnine was placed in the food of Strobaker to kill twenty-five men is the assertion of physicians who have been called, and the question now to be answered is who put the poison in his food.

The police claim to have enough evidence to warrant the detention of Mrs. Strobaker, but they admit they are after others.

Mrs. Strobaker said her husband had enemies among the men who worked in the elevators with him and that some of the more spiteful had evidently put the poison in his food.

JOHN ORTH'S SKELETON

In the Possession of Illinois Physician, So Latter Claims.

Carthage, Ill., Jan. 9.—Dr. H. D. Siegfried, a practicing physician of Denver, Ill., claims to own the skeleton of Duke Johann, the long-missing "John Orth," brother of Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria. He says it has been in his possession for twelve years. Dr. Siegfried says he has entered into negotiations with interested parties in Europe and refuses to give out any further information pending the results of the negotiations.

Superintendent York Resigns.

Indianapolis, Jan. 9.—After a continuous service of seventeen years at the Indiana boys' school, the last ten of which he served as the head of the institution, Superintendent Eugene E. York tendered his resignation to the board of control when it met for its monthly session today. No special reason for his action is given by Mr. York.

ENTERTAINS FOR GUEST.

One of the most pleasant social functions of recent date was a party given by Mrs. Caroline Williams in honor of her niece, Miss Fannie Williams, of Indianapolis. The surroundings within the home, flowers and appropriate decorations, were such as to give a nice setting for an evening of the best social pleasure. Games, music, improvisations and contests of wit and repartee enlivened the occasion to the great enjoyment of all present.

There was a delightful service of good things, exclusive products of the culinary art, and cakes and cream, chocolate, olives, and daintily prepared meats, all of which was presented in the most attractive and approved fashion.

Among the guests were the Misses Cora Smith, Fanny Ramey, Ida Miller, Alma Moore, Gertie Miller, Amie Moore, Fanny Miller, Liberta Adams, Irene Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Bundrant, and the Messrs. Blaine Moore, Wilson Bundrant, Wilbur Taylor, Luther Bundrant, and Mr. Maxwell.

All voted the occasion one of the most pleasant individually experienced.

MEXICAN REBELS ARE KEPT ON THE RETREAT

Railway Traffic In Disturbed District Again Open.

El Paso, Tex., Jan. 9.—It develops, with the opening of traffic south out of El Paso to Pearson and Casas Grandes and the arrival of authentic news from the Mormon colonies, that there has been fighting near the colonies, but now the federal troops are in control and the colonists are breathing easy again. The federals and a band of insurgents had a fight near Jackson's Mills in the colony of Dublan one day last week, and another band had a fight with federals near Juarez, while a band of robbers began operations against the colonists and natives throughout the region under the guise of insurgents and were run out by the insurgents after a hard fight.

The Mormons were excited during the fighting and kept their men and boys organized and armed ready to repulse any attack that might be made on their settlements. Some skirmishing is reported in the vicinity of Ojinaga, east of here, whither General Luque was sent with federal troops from Chihuahua.

Paz Orozco, leader of the retreating rebels in western Chihuahua, has seized the Mexico & Orient railroad west of Guerrero, from which he has retreated, but the road is a short line and of little consequence. He is in the mountains away from any town of importance. Madera, which has been isolated since the middle of December on account of cutting the railway near Pedernales, is again in communication with the world. There are several hundred men there.

Not a Shot Was Fired. City of Mexico, Jan. 9.—According to dispatches received by the minister of war, the city of Guerrero has been captured by the government troops without opposition. Not a shot was fired. As was predicted, the rebels, when they found they were unable to stop General Navarro before he arrived at Guerrero, deserted the town and took to the mountains. The minister of war declares that the backbone of the rebellion is now broken.

WINTER BALLOONING

Even a Gale Did Not Deter These St. Louis Aeronauts.

St. Louis, Jan. 9.—Starting at 6:50 last evening the balloon St. Louis No. 4, which was the Aero Club of St. Louis entry in the international race last October, J. C. Hulbert and Paul McCullough started in the direction of New York. The wind was blowing more than forty miles an hour when the balloon was let go, and it was immediately lost in the darkness. Hulbert, who is the pilot, hopes to land in New York state, but if the balloon is carried into Canada the aeronauts will endeavor to make a long distance record. Neither is a licensed pilot.

Logansport, Ind., Jan. 9.—John B. Allen was arrested here by Captain Thomas Halls of the United States secret service, charged with having passed a $1 silver certificate raised to a $20 national banknote, at a Logansport grocery a few days ago. Allen was given a hearing and bound over to the next session of the United States district court.

TURKS' YANKEE ADMIRAL HERE

Bucknam Pasha Again Visits Land of His Youth.

FAVORITE OF TWO SULTANS.

Made Hit With Abdul Hamid by Re-organizing Navy and Balking Robbing European Contractors—Nearly Started Mohammedan Revolt by Failing to Salute French Flag at Algiers.

A short, squarely built man was a recent visitor to New York and Washington and registered at hotels as "R. D. Bucknam, Constantinople." That is the way Bucknam Pasha, vice admiral of the Ottoman navy, aid-de-camp and naval adviser to the sultan, puts himself down when he gets among his old friends. The admiral is, or was, an American. He has had a career of real adventure. Twenty-seven years ago he was a cabin boy on a schooner on the great lakes.

Ransford D. Bucknam was born in Nova Scotia in 1869, but his parents almost immediately moved to Maine. At the age of fourteen he felt the call of the sea and followed it to the great lakes, where he became cabin boy on a schooner whose skipper was her owner. The captain and his wife took a liking to the youngster.

At sixteen Bucknam went from New York as quartermaster of a schooner bound for the Pacific. When the little vessel reached Manila the captain and the mates died of cholera, and as the boy was the only person left on the craft who had studied navigation he went before a special examining board, got a master's certificate, became a captain at seventeen and brought his vessel home.

Then followed many years on many scenes, including more experiences on the great lakes.

Captured Sultan's Fancy.

Bucknam had not made many trips across the Pacific before he was asked by the Cramps of Philadelphia to become their nautical expert. When the battleship Maine made her trial runs he was in command of her, and when the Cramps finished the Turkish cruiser Medjidia he was assigned to deliver her and sent to Turkey with a three months' contract to train her crew.

The Turkish navy had been a joke, at least since the battle of Navarino. Somehow Abdul Hamid took a fancy to the American sailor and asked him how he would like a job as naval adviser to himself at a princely salary. Bucknam asked for long enough leave to come home and get married. After a hurried trip to San Francisco he reported to the sultan on April 19, 1904. He started to put things shipshape so far as he could. It was not long before the sultan made him a pasha and admiral and conferred on him the order of Osmanieh and gave him a medal for distinguished service.

Report has it that Bucknam saved the sultan's life when an attempt was made to assassinate Abdul Hamid several years ago. While the sultan was returning to the Yildiz kiosk from the Hamidieh mosque a bomb thrown into the imperial escort killed scores of men and horses, rent the ground thereabouts and shook neighboring buildings. Bucknam Pasha stepped to the side of the sultan's carriage and shouted that he would lop off any hand that dared stretch forth toward the sultan. He walked, sword in hand, beside the carriage all the way to the palace. This act Abdul Hamid never forgot.

Balked Robbing Contractors.

Bucknam Pasha is the first Christian who ever had actual command of the Turkish navy. He won the sultan's favor by his honesty. It used to be the system, it is said, for English shipbuilders to get as much money as possible for ships as nearly worthless as the sultan's officers would accept. The sultan paid in one instance $1,650,000 and got in return an iron tub filled with junk, the whole worth perhaps $300,000. Of the money that went out of the sultan's purse his own officers got $1,200,000 and the contractors pocketed the modest sum of $450,000.

While bringing one of those new vessels around from the Atlantic Bucknam made a big hit with Mohammedans by neglecting to salute the French flag in Algerian waters. The Ottoman government had never recognized the French occupation of Algeria, and no Turkish ship had ever put into Algiers since the occupation.

A breakdown in his machinery late one evening off the Algerian coast obliged Bucknam to take refuge in the port of Algiers, which by careful timing he entered just before daybreak. Three times the French commander sent out word that he was ready to return the Turkish salute. Bucknam's guns did not boom. The port commander came to the conclusion that the habitual worthlessness of Turkish warships extended to the guns of this vessel.

But the Mohammedans came out in small boats by the thousands to see and touch the ship of the one great free power still ruled by Islam's great caliph. They kissed the ship, they crowded her decks, they filled flasks from the sacred water that washed her sides, and they prayed. From far away in the interior faithful Mussulmans made a three days' pilgrimage by camel back.

Burma's Gilded Pagoda.

Rangoon, the principal city of Burma, grew up around the sacred spot on which is built the great Shway Dagon pagoda, one of its principal wonders. "Rising to a height of 350 feet, its size is greatly enhanced by the fact that it stands on an eminence that is itself 160 feet above the level of the city," says a writer. "It is covered with pure gold from base to summit, and once in every generation this gold is completely renewed by public subscription. Yet throughout the interval the process of regilding goes on perpetually. Pious people who seek in this way to express their veneration and to add to their store of spiritual merit climb up daily with little fluttering packets of gold leaf, which they fasten on some fraction of its great surface. There is no more picturesque sight offered by it than that of a group of these silken worshipers outlined high against its gold in the act of contributing their small quota to its splendor. The pagoda itself has no interior. It is a solid stupa of brick raised over a relic chamber."

A sprained ankle will usually disable the injured person for three or four weeks. This is due to lack of proper treatment. ## ROBBED WIDOW AND MUTILATED BODY

Rode Island Police Seeking Cold-blooded Murderer.

Providence, R. I., Jan. 9.—Police of the entire state are on the lookout for the murderer of Mrs. Minka Fine, whose mutilated body was found in her little store in Ambrose street. She was the mother of Louis Fine, the Brown university athlete and Marathon runner. Her husband died suddenly six months ago and she had kept the store in an effort to give her boys an education. Three weapons were used by the murderer. With some flat instrument he broke the woman's jaw in three places and smashed her skull. Then, using a small knife, he stabbed her twice, once under the left arm and again in the left breast. With a four-pointed instrument something like a fork, he covered her entire body with wounds, the holes made by the weapon extending from the face to the arms and legs.

The store had been ransacked. The clothing of Mrs. Fine was torn to shreds in a search for her money. A large handbag which she carried was missing, as was a roll of bills which she always kept inside her waist. It is not thought that the murderer secured more than $50 in cash.

GREAT NAMES SURVIVE, BUT PLAY HUMBLE ROLES.

Charlemagne Is Hairdresser and Mars Night Watchman.

Somebody has been looking through the London directory for the names of dead and gone great men. There were some surprising finds—as, for instance, a William Shakespeare who is a tailor, John Milton a grocer and Francis Bacon an architect.

In Paris Charlemagne and Lamartine were discovered dressing hair, Daudet making lemonade and Racine peddling milk. Venus was selling candy in Paris and Mars beer in London.

But New York with its cosmopolitan population can show the most bewildering constellation of this sort.

There Venus is an actor, Mars a night watchman, which isn't a bad role for a Mars. Jupiter is keeping a meat shop, and Homer engages in the same unpoetic occupation. Caesar is a sign painter, and Cicero (down, restless shade) is a barber.

There is a flock of Raphaels, some grocers, some tailors, cutters, printers, lawyers, and so on. And Michelangelo cobbles shoes! Christopher Columbus sails the uncharted seas of feminine millinery, and Henry Hudson is a clerk. Bonaparte sells pens and pencils and ink bottles. Robert Bruce is a carpenter, and Charles Stuart, toasted innumerable times as "the king over the water," retains his association with that element by being a plumber.

Moliere is a grocer, Rousseau a hairdresser, and Francis Bacon makes pianos. A Dryden makes sirups, and a bunch of Samuel Johnsons deal in various commodities, including straw goods. Noll Goldsmith is a lawyer and Herbert Spencer a dentist.

George Washington appears in the dual role of barber and janitor (color not guaranteed, but suspected of having grown darker with the passing years); Roger Williams is a gardener, Benjamin Franklin a tailor, Alexander Hamilton a builder, Thomas Jefferson a "keeper," whether of men or of animals is not specified; John Adams a policeman, Aaron Burr a clerk and Abraham Lincoln a secretary.

WHITTLES HIS OWN TEETH.

Mail Carrier Makes His of Hickory and Saves Money.

Frank Forbis, ninety years old, who says he is the oldest mail carrier in the United States, having served nearly half a century on a fifteen mile run from Mumfordsville, Ky., the residence of General Simon Bolivar Buckner, to Cub Run, has applied to the government for a pension.

"Uncle Frank," as he is called, is the proud possessor of several hickory teeth, which he whittles out on his daily route. They fit perfectly, and the owner says he "kin crack a walnut" with them. Each tooth lasts several years and when one becomes worn he immediately trims out another. He has no use for the dentist.

THE ALL WOMEN'S COURT.

[Local women's organizations are agitating for a women's court conducted entirely by women.]
The prisoner sat in the convict's pen in the new all women's court. Where the brand of justice prepared for men.
Is ever the harshest sort.
A lady policeman stood her guard, And the lady lawyer was firm, While the lady judge, with her glances hard, Was making the poor wretch squirm.

The lady reporters heard the tale Of the gentleman prisoner's crime, And it looked as though he must go to jail For a pretty substantial time. So he looked for a way of dashing out, But "it's hopeless!" he cried. "Attack!" For an army of amazons stood about, All ready his head to crack. He heard the voice of the lady judge Upraised in a sort of sneer, "Ho, prisoner, don't you dare to budge, As your sentence you now shall hear!" But the prisoner smiled as he slowly reached In his pocket an agile thumb. "Look out!" the lady policeman shrieked. "He's going to hurl a bomb!" They sprang at him, for the battle primed, But as something fell to the floor They shrieked and all to the tables climbed, And he strode through the open door. And the prisoner smiled as he fled away Afar from that judgment house. "It's lucky for me I thought today To put in my years that mouse!" —Paul West in New York World.

BERNHARDT IS HOSPITABLE.

Entertains Dinner Guests She Never Saw Before.

An Italian journal in commenting on Mme. Sarah Bernhardt's recent appearances in America explains how it is that this great artist seems always in need of money. It is interesting to read that in the case of this distinguished artist her money is literally at the disposal not only of her near and distant relations and friends, but even of people she does not know, for her house is open to all.

At one time she never entertained less than twenty persons daily at dinner, and it is related that Alexandre Dumas, who was one day of the number, sitting at the right hand of Mme. Bernhardt, asked her, "Will you kindly tell me the name of your friend on the left?" "That is more than I can do," said she, "for I have never seen him before."

DO YOU GET YOUR MONEY'S WORTH?

Every day buying is becoming more of a science.

To buy the right kind of goods at the right prices requires discrimination and care—anyone can rush out and buy any old kind of goods from the first dealer he finds.

Some people fail to get the most for their money when it comes to buying their supplies, but are very particular about unimportant matters.

A great help in this direction are the advertisements of the merchants.

Before visiting the stores one can make the task comparatively easy by securing a great deal of information from the announcements of the dealers.

Then shopping can be more intelligently done.

A dealer's sins will sooner or later find him out if he makes a misstatement in his advertisement, and you may depend upon it that he can not keep it up for any great length of time.

It will lose him trade.

The dealer can not afford to misrepresent. He tells the public exactly what he has to sell and explains in honest terms the value of his goods. He is worthy of your confidence and can be depended upon implicitly. This dealer regularly makes his announcements through the columns of the newspapers.

Advertising is the searchlight which reveals true character and only the truth alone can stand regular advertising.

It will pay you to read the advertisements.

The Theory of It.

The Logansport Tribune gives a hint in a rather long article that may be read in part with profit by Rushville ministers and others who often attempt to write for the press.

The fact is that a newspaper will not refuse a good article written according to news style, but does refuse every day columns and columns of worthless stuff, much of it worthless only because it is not written as a news article ought to be written. The Tribune presses home a point as follows:

"Probably not one reader in a hundred has paused to notice that a newspaper article is written on a plan just the reverse of that of a sermon or oration. Comparatively few ministers have analyzed the subject sufficiently to notice this fact, and their ignorance of it will often account for the reluctance of newspapers to accept matter contributed by them. It is worth the while of every man and woman to know the general plan on which newspaper articles are written, for almost everybody desires at times to announce something through the press. The mere knowledge of the theory will not make a successful writer in this or any other department, but it is the first step.

"The skillful preacher or orator usually reserves his more important points until toward the end of his discourses, closing with a climax. The skillful newspaper reporter put his climax into his first sentence and ends with the most non-essential detail.

"While the novelist secures his dramatic effect by keeping the secret of his story hidden as long as possible, the reporter attains success by revealing his secret as quickly as words will let him. Both are working on principles as clearly defined as those on which a sonnet is constructed, but the modern newspaper articles are of so much more recent date that few critics have analyzed them, and even many of the best newspaper writers work daily upon the foregoing principle without knowing it. No man can work many days under a metropolitan city editor without learning it."

Some men wait for opportunity. Of that class is the business man who does not advertise. The progressive merchant searches for opportunities, finds them and uses them to his own advantage. He does that when he undertakes to keep his business in the public mind by advertising generously and wisely, and he reaps the reward of his foresight and fertility of mind.

The Indianapolis Star, in making reply to the Huntington Times, insists that it is a better friend of President Taft than the president himself, says the Marion Chronicle. The readers of the Star have a pretty definite idea that the paper has missed no opportunity to discredit the national administration from the day the stomach was kicked off the statesman who did the kicking stunt and ever since. That President Taft has a shred of standing left in Indiana is due only to the fact that the Star's course has been so inconsistent and unrepentant that no one pays any particular attention to its lucubrations.

NEW JERSEY WOMEN ONCE VOTED, THEN WERE ROBBED

Had Equal Franchise From 1776 to 1807, It Is Asserted.

Soon after helping to carry the Republican stronghold of Plainfield, N. J., for Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic club of that city did another thing equally without precedent in inviting the women of the Equal Suffrage league to come to a club meeting and state their reasons for demanding the ballot.

The invitation was accepted, and the speakers for the league were its president, Mrs. Champlain L. Riley, and Miss Zoe Russell-Bateman.

That the women of New Jersey were robbed of the franchise 103 years ago, after they had had it for thirty-one years, was one of the interesting things that the club learned from Miss Bateman. She recalled the fact that the Continental congress of 1776 dodged the woman suffrage question by leaving it to each state to decide for itself.

"And to the lasting glory of New Jersey," she continued, "this state gave the ballot to her women. They had it until 1807. In that year there was a great election fraud scandal incidental to the vote in the location of state buildings. Many persons voted early and often. Minors and foreigners, who had no rights at the polls at all, voted without hindrance.

"There was nothing to show that the women were guilty of these frauds. At least they alone were not guilty. But in November of that year the legislature, without sanction of the people, as required by law, amended the constitution so as to deprive the women of the suffrage."

CEMENT HOUSES AS TOYS.

Twenty Thousand Make Novel Christmas Presents to Poor Children.

Mrs. Mirabeau L. Towns, wife of a Brooklyn lawyer, gave an order at the New York cement show for the making of 20,000 cement toy houses which she later distributed among poor children throughout the city. The molds used for the toy houses are miniatures of the mold invented by Thomas A. Edison for full sized cement structures.

Mrs. Towns, who was recently appointed a member of the board of education, visited the cement show twice. The second time she called she placed in the hands of Mr. Beck, the manager, a certified check to pay for 20,000 miniature cement houses. Mr. Beck was amazed at the order until Mrs. Towns told him that the houses were to make glad the hearts of as many poor children.

There were doll houses for the girls and factories, garages, engine houses, stables and the like for boys. Each house for the girls has little windows ready for curtains and shades. There is a bathroom, drawing room, kitchen and dining room in each house for the girls, as well as a veranda and rear stoop. Paneled doors on hinges, window sashes with cords and weights, a basement and a chimney are other appointments.

Leaving Rushville at 10:52 over the C. H. & D. via St. Louis and Kansas City, reaching Roswell, N. M., Thursday evening at 5:00 o'clock. As Gold was the strong, ever pulling magnet which sent the first Americans across the unknown wastes of this continent to sunny California in 1849. So today the apple is pulling thousands upon thousands more people from the East, the North and the South into the great fertile Pecos Valley of New Mexico.

You no doubt saw the exhibit of Oregon and Montana land products this last few days, but do you know that the Pecos Valley produces even finer and more high grade apples, fruit and alfalfa than any you saw. They took more prizes at Chicago and St. Louis than any other fruit section. The call of the west comes today insistent and inviting. Formerly it was the "Call of the Wild" a voice from out a vast wilderness of mountains, deserts and plains. The Iron Horse has conquered distance and the barriers long interposed by vast spaces of waterless desert have been thrown down. Irrigation canals long enough to girdle the Globe with triple bands have spread wide oasis of green in the arid places. Cheerful, prosperous and happy communities dot a landscape once vacant and voiceless.

Come and go with our excursion, Tuesday, January 17th, and see this new land. Take a well deserved vacation and come with me to a land of sunshine and warm pleasant days, where you can work the year round and really enjoy life. January 17th will be the next big excursion. Write or telephone me at once, so I can make room for you.

Rush county farmers believe that the most successful institute in the history of the county was just closed Saturday evening. The weather was ideal for the last two days' sessions here and the crowds were far above the average.

The instructors this year were very pleasing and their lectures have been highly complimented. The two special instructors were Joseph P. Prigg, president of the Indiana Corn Growers' Association, and Miss Berry, instructor in domestic science at Purdue University. Aside from their talks, one of the most appreciated efforts on the program was the lecture by T. A. Coleman of this county on road improvement.

At the close of the Saturday's session, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: George W. Looney, president; J. A. Frazee, vice-president; Donald Alexander, secretary and treasurer.

CHAPTER XIX.

Roscoe.

Roscoe had never been able to clear up his doubt as to Jeanne's identity, nor to solve the mystery of Cayley's appearance in the air. The doubt and the mystery tormented him worse than any final conviction could have done. When he thought, as he sometimes did, that the cause of all his terror, the thing which kept him penned up here in the cave and denied him access to more than the furtive edges of the beach, might be just a rather defenseless human couple, a man and a woman, and the woman beautiful, young, alluring—when he thought of all that he would go off into transports of rage, which left even his gigantic body limp and exhausted. If that were the situation, he might have killed the man weeks ago and taken possession of the woman.

The thing that kept him sane was, in itself, a species of insanity, the passion for gold which had led him to murder Captain Fielding. Every day he tramped up the glacier to the gold ledge and there, while the light lasted, he worked, cutting the precious metal out of the rock, and with infinite labor beating it pure.

As the weeks and months dragged along, this unvaried routine more than compensated for the solitude and the terrors his superstition thrust upon him, and gradually restored him to his old normal, formidable, brutal self. On the day when he made the discovery that was to terminate the long series of golden days which Jeanne and Philip had been enjoying, he was, again, the very man who, during those long years of exile, had dominated crew and captain of the Walrus and bent them to his will.

He was returning from the ledge along the crown of the glacier, when, on the day of this discovery, he found that his accustomed path was interrupted by a new fissure in the ice; it had occurred since he had come that way in the morning, and was too broad to leap across. So he was forced to descend by the rougher and more difficult track which lay along the moraine.

Before he had gone three paces along this track his eye made out something, just off his path and a little below it, which caused him at first to utter a snarl of anger, but led him the next moment to give a wild blasphemous yell of joy.

The great fissure which had opened in the ice had done, in an instant, what the party from the Aurora had failed to do after hours of hard labor—it had yielded up the body of Perry Hunter, which, during all these months, it had kept imprisoned.

Strapped across the dead man's shoulders, just where he had carried it in life, was a rifle and around his middle a belt full of cartridges.

The next instant Roscoe was bending over the body, jerking savagely at the frozen buckles which resisted his impatient fingers. But they were not to be denied. If they were clumsy, the hands were strong.

It was not five minutes later when Roscoe, rifle and ammunition belt in his hands, was hurrying on toward his cave once more. The body lay just where his desecrating hands had left it.

The rifle was uninjured; that he had seen at a glance, though, of course, all the mechanism of its breech was frozen fast. But a half hour's hard work with cleaning rod and rags of what once had been a shirt, sufficed to put it into commission again.

Then, with the rifle over his shoulder, he swaggered out of the cave. With his first glance abroad, he started. His devil was being kind to him today. There could be no doubt of that. Only, was he being too kind? Roscoe wondered a little uneasily. For, shambling along the ice, through the thickening twilight, not 100 paces away, was a big bear. Roscoe was tired of walrus meat. The thought of a bear steak made his mouth water.

Three years' disuse, however, had made his marksmanship somewhat uncertain. He fired too soon, and though he did not miss, the only effect his shot had was to make the bear turn about and go shambling down the glacier toward the beach, with ungainly haste. Roscoe hurried after him, and fired two more shots.

MODERN HAIR DRESSING

Has played havoc with the tresses of the fair sex, and druggists everywhere comment on the fact that they are selling large quantities of sage for making the old-fashioned "sage tea," such as was used by our grandmothers for promoting the growth of their hair and restoring its natural color. The demand for this well-known herb for this purpose has been so great that one manufacturer has taken advantage of the fact, and has placed on the market an ideal "sage tea," containing sulphur, a valuable remedy for dandruff and scalp rashes and irritations. This preparation, which is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, is sold by all leading druggists for 50 cents and $1 a bottle, or will be sent direct by the Wyeth Chemical Company, 74 Cortlandt St., New York City, upon receipt of price.

Hargrove and Mullin, Druggists.

Whether they hit or not, he could not tell. Certainly they did not serve to check the bear's flight. The next moment he had rounded the corner of the cliff and disappeared down the beach in the direction of the hut.

Roscoe hesitated, but only for a moment; then, with an oath, he set out in pursuit. It was not so much the protection which the rifle afforded him that was responsible for this new courage as it was that the mere feel of it in his hands brought him back in touch once more with the everyday matter of fact world, and made his visions and ghosts seem a little unreal.

It was fully dark down here in the shadow of the cliff. The lumbering yellow shape of the bear was indistinguishable against the icy beach. That didn't matter, for he could follow along well enough by the bloody tracks the wounded beast had left.

The last of the twilight was still in the sky, and half his glances were directed thither, looking for something which he told himself could not possibly exist, except in his own fancy, yet fully expected to see nevertheless, the shadow of Cayley's great wings. And at last he saw it impending in the lower air, like a brooding spirit, just above the tiny square of light which marked the location of the hut.

Roscoe abandoned his pursuit of the bear; all thought of it, in fact, was gone from his mind; but he did not, as on a former occasion, drop down prone upon the ground, his face buried in his arms; nor did he turn and flee like one hag-ridden up the beach. He faltered, it is true, and his knees trembled beneath him, and yet, slowly and with many pauses he made his way forward.

He was horribly afraid all the time, but curiosity was all the while overpowering fear. He was not more than 200 yards away when Cayley alighted beside the girl.

At what he saw then, Roscoe dropped his rifle on the beach, with a whispered oath, and rubbed his eyes. The light which diffused itself from the open window of the hut was not much, but it was enough to reveal the fact that this great man-bird, this golden-winged spirit which had kept him in terror for his own sanity all these months, was taking off his wings and folding them up into a bundle, in as matter-of-fact a way as if he were furling an umbrella. He stood there now, just an ordinary human figure of a man; the very man, in fact, that he had seen before and would have killed long ago had it not been for his over-mastering terror of the thing with wings.

He presented a fair mark now, and was in easy range, but Roscoe was too thoroughly astonished to seize the opportunity, and in a moment it was gone again. The two figures shrank into the shadow of the hut, and the next moment the light disappeared.

For a moment, an accession of rage against the two who had baffled him and enjoyed immunity from him so long, almost led him to attempt to break into the hut then and there, and settle matters; but his saner common sense told him that the settlement would almost inevitably be against him should he attempt it.

He was still entertaining this notion, however, when a luminous idea occurred to him. Around on the far side of the hut, the west side, which looked toward the headlands, was a good-sized heap of fire-wood, which Philip had not been able to find room for inside the hut. Roscoe had with him a flint and steel and a quantity of tow. He never traveled without them.

With infinite precaution against noise he began laying a fire against the windward wall of the hut. Squatting, with his rifle across his knees ready to use in case of an emergency, he methodically whittled a quantity of dry splinters off a few of the sticks, ignited them and carefully nursed the blaze, until, under the rising wind, it grew to the beginning of a fair-sized conflagration. Then, catching up his rifle, he slipped around the other side of the hut, crouching down not more than 20 paces away, and waited.

Already the fire was burning finely and the silhouetted outline of the hut was plain against the glow of it.

His plan was a good one. The people inside the hut would have no choice and, probably, no thought, but of escape. When they rushed out, as they almost certainly would, bewildered and confused, and plainly visible to him against the glow of the fire behind them, it would be easy, from the safe shelter of the darkness, to shoot—the man.

It was only, indeed, by the merest hair's breadth that Roscoe's plan failed to work. The instinct of escape by the nearest way from a burning building is almost irresistible, and it led Philip and Jeanne to the very edge of the destruction, which Roscoe had planned for them.

Cayley had his hand upon the bolt of the great door, whether he had sprung when Jeanne's cry had awakened him, before the saving second thought stayed him and held him frozen where he was. For perhaps five seconds he stood there, while the memory of the unexplained bullet hole he had found in the body of the great bear, and the belated observation that the fire, which was destroying the hut, must have been started outside of it, articulated themselves into a perfectly clear perception of Roscoe's plan.

"The other way! The other way!" he cried, motioning Jeanne back through the storeroom. "Into the cave. He is waiting for us outside. That's why he fired the hut. Quick. We must save all we can."

And so it happened that Roscoe waited in vain. He saw the blaze had kindled reach its fiery climax, and then in spite of the icy gale which was fanning it, die down into an angry, sullen, smouldering glow. But no man appeared to furnish a mark for his waiting rifle, and no woman was delivered defenseless, shelterless, into his brutish hands.

The failure of his plan brought back a moment or two of the old superstitious horror, but his mind was braced against it now and did not readily give way. Somehow, the failure must be accountable—humanly accountable.

At last he solved this mystery, too, partly solved it, at least, for he remembered the ice cave back of the hut. His first impulse, when he thought of it, was to attack them there and now, to charge in over the red hot coals of the hut and settle matters once and for all.

He was sane enough to see that the advantage would be all against him. In close quarters he could not do much with a rifle; and he remembered the deadly revolver shooting he

Simple Way to Cure Corns.

Never cut a corn. Hundreds have died from blood poison caused by cutting corns. The surest way to cure a corn is to soften it by applying a thick coat of plex on the affected parts. had seen upon the body of the bear. Also, he would have to go into the dark, with the firelight behind him. No. It wouldn't do. He must wait. Well, he could afford to wait—much better than they could.

Reluctantly he rose, turned his broad back to the gale, and began making his laborious way back to the cave.

It was high time. His face was frozen already. The intensity of the cold had already rendered his rifle useless, for the whole mechanism of the breech was frozen fast. His stratagem had failed in its ultimate intention, for nature had laid her great icy hand upon the board and for the present declared the game a draw.

BREEZES DECREE SAXON SMOKING

Forest Travelers Must Not Puff if Wind Is Wrong.

BUT LIBERTY IS TRIUMPHANT

Putting Responsibility on Tobacco Devotes New Feature, and Covered Pipe Is No Longer Legal Necessity. Citizens Still Forced to Fight Fires For Kingdom.

How is this for an example of personal liberty triumphant?

You may smoke on the roads running through the forests of Saxony, Germany, if you are reasonably cautious.

Understand, this is a privilege that in the interests of conservation for many years was arbitrarily denied unless you used a covered pipe. Now you don't have to have the covered pipe. You may smoke a meerschaum or a clay. You may smoke a Havana filler or a stogie, a Turkish cigarette or a piece of rope if you choose, the only proviso being that the devotee of my Lady Nicotine shall avoid danger of fire by considering the following matters:

Season of the year.
How recently it rained or snowed.
Direction of the wind.
Velocity of the wind.
Width of the road.
Character of the underbrush.
Condition of leaves or needles on ground.
Anything else that would tend to justify the apprehension of fire.

That's all. It need no longer be said that government does not place confidence in the intelligence and faithfulness of the average citizen. Here is evidence of that confidence, and it is contained in a recent issue of the consular reports published in Washington.

Forests Objects of Jealousy.

The Saxons give jealous protection to their forests. As a result, fires are surprisingly rare, according to Consul Carl Bailey Hurst at Plauen. When a fire breaks out, usually as a result of lightning, there is a regulation of 135 years' standing which directs all inhabitants of the nearest hamlets or villages to assemble at once at the scene of conflagration with axes, hatchets, mattocks, shovels or other effective implements prepared to fight the flames.

The German federal law provides a maximum fine of 150 marks ($35.70) to be imposed on any one who will not assist in putting out fires when called upon by police authorities, and the judge in inquiring whether the kind of help demanded was either suitable or necessary. As the country is thickly populated, there never is a scarcity of fire fighters to attack any blaze which may break out.

A new forest law which went into effect in Saxony last year punishes with a fine not exceeding 60 marks ($14.28) or with imprisonment not exceeding two weeks whoever shall enter a forest or go near one with an unguarded fire or light in any manner involving risk.

Velocity of Wind Important.

That is where the triumph of personal liberty comes in. That is how it is possible for a smoker to take his weed in his teeth and boldly march through a forest road, provided only that he measure the velocity of the wind, determine its direction and otherwise look about him as already indicated.

The experience of the state forest supervisors has been, according to the report, that there is no need of sweeping prohibition of smoking or a rule permitting only the use of covered pipes. It is held that there is no danger from smoking on forest roads in wet seasons, during rain or snow storms or shortly thereafter. A man must use his judgment. But throwing away burning cigar ends is contrary to law under any and all conditions.

BERLIN PRESERVES FORESTS.

Seven Adjacent Tracts Are Purchased For $45,000,000.

The determination of Berlin's municipal authorities to make their city the model of what a metropolis ought to be is demonstrated afresh by their intention to maintain the fine forests which surround it.

Busy as they are with the problem of relieving street congestion and providing suitable lines of transportation for the rapidly increasing population, they have found time to conclude negotiations with the government for the purchase of seven forests situated at various points about the city and covering in all something less than 40,000

MORE POWER FOR BOARD OF HEALTH

Indiana Legislature Will Be Asked to Grant It.

ITS LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

With the Approval of the Governor, the Indiana Health Board Has Prepared a Series of Bills Which Will Be Urged Upon the Lawmakers With a View to Creating Better Conditions For Health in Hoosier State.

Indianapolis, Jan. 9.—The Indiana lawmakers entered upon their first full week of activity with the reconvening of the general assembly this afternoon, and there was a general feeling that the legislative machinery would be working smoothly and under a full head of steam with little delay. Chief interest in the afternoon's proceeding centered about the "plunder" committee's announcement of appointments, and many place hunters were made glad.

Speaker Veneman has announced the appointment of Joseph M. Cravens of Madison as chairman of the ways and means committee and floor leader of the majority in the house.

An Ambitious Program.

The state board of health has outlined its legislative program, which includes a weights and measures bill, a bill providing for medical inspection of school children, a cold storage bill, a sanitary schoolhouse bill, a Pasteur institute bill, a bill for the prevention of blindness in new born, and amendments to the pure food law. Practically all the bills have been drafted and approved by Governor Marshall and Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the board.

Children who bathe but infrequently or not at all, will be subject to official notice, as provided in the bill for the medical inspection of school children. The truant officer is empowered, upon the order of the school authorities, to have all children bathed and cleaned, who may need such treatment.

For Better Sanitation.

"The medical inspection bill," said Dr. Hurty, "will, if it passes the general assembly, do more to save the lives of children and reduce the death rate, increase their efficiency and productivity than any other measure that can be enacted. It is emphatically a measure of economy as well as of humanity."

The sanitary schoolhouse bill sets out specifically what sanitary features will be required in all school buildings to be erected in the future. This bill also probably will be introduced by Senator McCarty.

The cold storage bill has been drafted and approved by Governor Marshall. No one has been selected to introduce the measure in the general assembly. It provides that all products must be tagged when they are placed in cold storage and that the tags must show when the goods enter and when they leave the cold storage. The tags must follow the products until they are consumed. The sale of a product which has been in cold storage longer than nine months is prohibited.

ROBBERS SLUG VICTIM

General Agent of Indianapolis Southern in Serious Condition.

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 9.—While returning to his garage after an auto drive at 11:30 o'clock at night, Samuel Draper, forty years old, general agent of the Indianapolis Southern railroad, was slugged by two masked men, who robbed him of $2,000 in checks and currency and his gold watch. Some time later his groans were heard and he was taken to a hospital, where his skull was operated upon. He is in a critical condition. An investigation around the garage showed that the robbers used a railroad coupling pin in felling Mr. Draper.

Town Will Vote on It.

Danville, Ind., Jan. 9.—The board of trustees of the town of Danville, in addition to calling a special election for Jan. 26 to fill three vacancies on the board, have called a special election to be held Feb. 2 to determine whether the town shall install sanitary sewerage, to be paid for by taxation. It is estimated that the system would cost the town $100,000, for which property holders would have to pay in special taxes.

He Wasn't Far Away.

Princeton, Ind., Jan. 9.—After following clues in all parts of the country for a brother who mysteriously disappeared from his home in Salem, Ind., six years ago, W. L. Taylor, a horse buyer of Salem, accidentally stumbled on the name of the missing brother, Wynn Taylor, in a hotel register at Evansville and later found him working near here.

Hunter Fell Into River.

Mt. Vernon, Ind., Jan. 9.—William Burroughs of Ridgeway, O., drowned in the Ohio river while duck hunting with a companion. They had shot several ducks and Burroughs went in a canoe to get them. He stood up in the boat, which capsized, and being heavily clothed and weighted with ammunition, he was unable to swim or hold to the boat.

GOV. DONAGHEY
 Arkansas Executive Pays Respects To Secretary of the Navy Meyer.

TOO DEEP FOR WORDS

Was the Criticism Governor Donaghey Had For Secretary Meyer.

Little Rock, Ark., Jan. 9.—Governor Donaghey in a letter to Secretary of the Navy Meyer severely criticised that official for the action of the navy department in its arrangements for launching the battleship Arkansas, and the governor asserts the state will take no further responsibilities for the ceremonies on Jan. 14. Referring to a request made to the navy department that the launching be postponed, Governor Donaghey's letter says:

"You treated my suggestion with indifference. In doing this you were not only guilty of gross discourtesy to the representative of a sovereign state, but subjected yourself to a criticism that can not be adequately expressed in an official communication from the representative of a state to an officer of the federal government."

OHIO GAS MAGNATE SLAIN BY A KANSAN

Dispute Over Oil Lands Leads to Tragedy.

Caney, Kan., Jan. 9.—J. D. S. Neeley, banker, capitalist, oil and gas magnate and prominent Oklaon of Lima, was shot and killed in the Palace hotel by Al O. Truskett, a prominent business man of this city.

The shooting was the outcome of a dispute some time ago between the two men because of a lease of valuable oil lands near Caney which both men claimed.

After the shooting Truskett surrendered and claimed he shot in self defense. Later at a coroner's inquest it was found that Neeley was unarmed when he met death. Truskett was arraigned on a charge of murder in the first degree and was released on $25,000 bond.

SHOT WOMAN

Then Barricaded Himself in Home and Defied the Officers.

Tell City, Ind., Jan. 9.—Mrs. Charles Drewry was shot by Joseph Weigang as she was feeding the chickens in the rear of her home.

Weigang, who, it is thought, was insane temporarily, was in the rear of his home, a few feet from the Drewry house, when he noticed Mrs. Drewry. Without warning, it is said, he went into his house and obtained a rifle. He then came out and shot Mrs. Drewry through the head. She is in a critical condition.

After shooting Mrs. Drewry, Weigang barricaded himself in his home and threatened to shoot the officers and citizens who aided in trying to affect his capture. He shot at Marshal Oberle three times, but missed him. The marshal shot through the window several times, frightening Weigang, who surrendered. Weigang is sixty-five years old.

LOOKING INTO IT

Fort Wayne Police Scandal Will Be Thoroughly Sifted.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Jan. 9.—The local department of safety is determined to ascertain whether or not there is any truth in the charges to the effect that police department heads received and accepted Christmas gifts from keepers of houses of ill fame. Formal proceedings were filed against all the men named in the charges. The proceedings were brought by the board of safety and the report declared that one of the department officials had received a watch, while another had been presented with a diamond.

Duluth Boy Bandits Arrested.

Duluth, Minn., Jan. 9.—William Muzzard and Algot Johnson, the boy bandits, who held up the clerk and night porter of a local hotel and then shot Policeman Cheshmore, who arrested them, are lodged in the Duluth city jail awaiting a formal complaint against them.

CARNEGIE TRUST WAS LONGSHAKY

It Came Near Going Under in Panic of 1907.

GRAND JURY MAY TAKE A HAND

New York Banking Department Has Called in the District Attorney to Look Into Affairs of the Broken Carnegie Trust Company, and It Is Hinted There May Be Work For the Prosecutor.

New York, Jan. 9.—Until its tangled affairs shall be straightened out, the state banking department has taken possession of the Carnegie Trust company and closed the doors of that institution.

The institution is said to be beyond hope of salvation. With respectable securities to offer it could have had, on the very night before the superintendent of the banking department descended upon it, at least $1,000,000, but these were not forthcoming. The deposits in the company had shrunk from $18,500,000 at the time of its greatest prosperity in 1909, to hardly more than $1,500,000 in individual deposits subject to check, at the time of the failure. To meet this steady drain the company was forced to sacrifice what reliable securities it possessed.

Sympathy for the man who came up from the south to take charge of the precarious affairs of the company three months ago, is expressed on all sides. Bankers agree that whatever blame there may be for the failure cannot attach itself to the new president of the Carnegie, Joseph T. Howell. On the other hand it was learned that the banking department has called in District Attorney Whitman to look into the past history of the concern and determine whether or not there was any criminal liability in its management. The outcome of his labors may be a matter for the consideration of the grand jury.

It has developed that the company nearly went under in the panic of 1907. The general impression that the influence of Andrew Carnegie was behind the company and the fact that the name of Leslie Shaw, who had so recently been secretary of the treasury, was with the concern were two things that saved the trust company at that time.

Of course, the big steel man, aside from his friendship for Charles M. Schwab, had no interest in the company. More than that, he was extremely averse to the use of his name. Not only did he issue a statement to the effect that he did not desire his name to be connected with the trust company, but he sent his attorney to Albany to see if it were not possible to force the concern to take some other name. The response to this was that the company was not calling itself the Andrew Carnegie Trust company, and that there was more than one man in the world named Carnegie. The members of the clearing house committee, who have been called in, want it distinctly understood that the failed company did not clear through them. They say that the general banking conditions are good and that no big banks will be hurt by this failure.

FEUD OF OLD MEN

It Had Been Kept Alive For Years, and Ends in Tragedy.

Russellville, Ky., Jan. 9.—James U. Laswell of Dennis, Ky., was shot and instantly killed here by his brother-in-law, Morton H. Rogers. It is claimed that as Laswell was hitching a horse in front of Rogers' home the latter appeared with a double-barreled shotgun and emptied both barrels into Laswell's back. Both men are seventy years old and the trouble is said to have dated back a number of years, and it had concerned a woman. Rogers surrendered and is in custody.

He Took It to Heart.

New York, Jan. 9.—Charles A. Hughes, an art student who took poison Saturday night, died early Sunday morning at a hospital. From the letters found in his pocket it was apparent his sweetheart had refused to marry him and he had concluded there was no "use in living." Hughes was twenty-two years old and was the son of Captain William N. Hughes, a retired army officer. He came to this city some time ago from Columbia, Tenn.

Western Gale Indulges in Pranks.

Denver, Jan. 9.—A gale which reached a velocity of seventy-five miles an hour performed some queer stunts in Colorado and Wyoming. In Cheyenne it tore the roof off of a box car on which a brakeman was riding, and he took an aeroplanic flight of half a mile, landing with a broken arm and several bruises. A Cheyenne merchant on his way to make a deposit had over $300 in currency blown out of his bankbook.

Out of Work; Takes Poison.

South Bend, Ind., Jan. 9.—Although Martha Lukaczewicz, his child sweetheart, snatched the vial from him, Anthony Kujawski drank enough poison to cause his death. He was twenty-two years old and she was fifteen. The young man had been out of work nearly seven weeks and became disheartened, as he had hoped to marry the girl.

SENTENCED MAN IMPLICATES TROUT

Clyde Perry Says Ogden Resident Bought Stolen Can of Lard From Him.

NEIGHBORS ARE INDIGNANT

As an outgrowth of the arrest and later sending to the reformatory of Clyde Perry of Ogden, for stealing a horse and buggy, James Trout of the same town on the Henry-Rush county line has been arrested and has given bond in the sum of $500 for his appearance in the Henry circuit court.

After Perry was arrested he confessed to stealing two tickets from the traction station at Ogden and also to stealing a can of lard. He informed the officers that Trout told him of the lard being in the station and that if he would get it he would pay him $2.50 for it. Perry claims he stole the can of lard and gave it to Trout, who paid him $2.50.

A delegation of Ogden citizens were in New Castle Saturday afternoon demanding that Trout be set free. His neighbors say that young Perry deliberately told a lie to get Trout involved and are indignant, alleging that Trout is an honest and law abiding citizen and has never been in any trouble before.

SAID TO BE ONLY ONE OF KIND

The task of moving the heavy safe of the Rushville National bank's old building in East Second street to the new modern bank building at the corner of Second and Main streets which is just now being completed, was almost as great as building the building itself. Workmen began Saturday at noon and Sunday at noon, after twenty-four hours of continuous work, they had the safe set in the vault in the new building. They found it necessary to tear out part of the wall in the old building to get it out. The men worked without stopping all night and Sunday morning. The safe is a globular shaped affair and is said to be absolutely burglar proof. Bank officials say that it is the only safe of its kind anywhere.
